As a busy service centre for the South Cariboo, the District of 100 Mile House has a strong commercial and service-based economy. Our small, friendly community of 2,000 residents supports a large rural area population of about 15,000 year-round residents, which seasonally grows to 20,000 or more.

100 Mile House offers an ideal location along Highway 97, the major north-south highway corridor in the province. It is estimated that 2.5 million vehicles travel through the community each year. The business opportunities associated with this number of travelers is significant.

The economy is strongly supported by forestry, tourism and agriculture. The forest sector includes dimensional sawmilling and log home building industries, which have gained worldwide recognition.

We are known for an abundance of outdoor recreation opportunities and for the South Cariboo's clean air and pristine lakes. Residents can enjoy a comfortable rural lifestyle, with all the amenities of a larger city.

A perfect combination, our attractive cost of living, hospitality and lifestyle come together to create an exceptional quality of life for you, your family, and your staff. Come do business with us in 100 Mile House.
