Subject: 100 Mile House TSA Timber Supply Review Discussion Paper
Attachments: My esponse to the 100 Mile House TSA Timber Supply Discussion Paper.docx

Hi Tammy

Thank you for taking the time to speak with me on Monday, August 17, 2026.

As I understand, the Town Council had an opportunity to hear Kane Copley's presentation and review his proposal regarding the future approach to logging in the Cariboo.

I have prepared a response to Mr. Copley's paper, outlining some of my concerns and providing additional information for consideration. I am hoping that the Town Council would be willing to review my response and, if possible, weigh in on these concerns.

Please see attached document.

I believe it is important that we take a thoughtful and cautious approach to this proposal and ensure that the long-term impacts on our forests, communities, and future generations are fully considered.

Thank you again for your time.

Kind regards,
Katrin Levermann

Re: 100 Mile House TSA Timber Supply Review Discussion Paper

To whom it may concern

I have read the discussion paper regarding the 100 Mile House Timber Supply Area (TSA). I recognize that a considerable amount of work and technical analysis has gone into preparing this document. At the same time, I found parts of the paper difficult to interpret, particularly when trying to understand the assumptions behind the modelling and how the proposed timber supply relates to broader ecological sustainability.

I would therefore appreciate clarification on a number of points.

1. Definition and measurement of sustainability

The paper states:

“Based on current forest management practices and inventory information used to prepare the base case, it is possible to harvest 702,000 cubic meters per year of live volume for the next nine decades in the 100 Mile House TSA.”

It also states that growing stock was assessed for all harvest projections to ensure sustainability in meeting the harvest requests.

What exactly was assessed in determining that this level of harvesting is sustainable? What measurements, indicators and ecological factors were taken into consideration?

More fundamentally, how is “sustainability” being defined in this analysis?

A sustainable timber yield is not necessarily the same as a sustainable forest ecosystem. A forest can theoretically continue producing a certain volume of timber while simultaneously losing habitat complexity, biodiversity, mature forest structure, hydrological function and ecological resilience.

I would therefore like to understand whether the assessment of sustainability refers primarily to the continued availability of merchantable timber, or whether ecological sustainability is measured independently and given comparable weight.

2. Reliability of very long-term projections

I am also concerned about the very long-time horizon used in the modelling.

The paper presents projections extending approximately 200 years into the future. I question how confidently forest growth and timber availability can be projected over such a long period given the rapidly changing environmental conditions in the Cariboo.

Climate change is already affecting temperature, precipitation, snowpack, drought conditions, groundwater recharge, wildfire frequency and severity, insects and forest regeneration. Future forests will not necessarily grow under the same climatic conditions as the forests on which existing growth models are based.

How are these uncertainties incorporated into the projections?

I would also like to see a much clearer short- and medium-term analysis—for example, projections for the next 10, 20, 30 and 50 years—rather than relying heavily on projections extending one or two centuries into the future.

3. Determination of the Annual Allowable Cut

Who ultimately determines and justifies the proposed annual harvest level? I understand that the Chief Forester determines the Allowable Annual Cut, but I would like clarification about the criteria used in reaching that determination.

Specifically, how are ecological limits weighed against timber-supply objectives?

What evidence demonstrates that a harvest level of approximately 702,000 cubic meters of live volume per year can be maintained without compromising other forest values?

4. Reliance on existing natural stands

As I understand the analysis, the base-case harvest is initially composed almost entirely of existing natural stands, with managed stands becoming an increasingly significant component of the harvest later.

This raises an important concern.

For approximately the next two decades, continued timber supply appears to depend heavily on harvesting existing natural forests until managed stands become available for harvest.

I would like to understand how the ecological consequences of this transition have been assessed.

Reforestation can replace timber-producing trees, but it cannot quickly recreate mature and old forest structures such as large trees, standing deadwood, decaying logs, multilayered canopies, established soil systems, nesting and denning structures, microhabitats and ecological relationships that have developed over decades or centuries.

Planting trees following harvest therefore does not necessarily constitute ecological replacement of the forest that was removed.

How does B.C. determine that a logging operation is sustainable when ecological characteristics of the harvested stand may take many decades or centuries to re-establish?

5. Data and assumptions underlying the base case

The paper states that the base case:

“uses a specific set of available data and forest management assumptions that are intended to reflect current forest composition and growth, legally established management objectives, and management practices.”

What exactly constitutes this “specific set of available data”?

I would appreciate a clear list of the datasets, inventory information, growth assumptions and management assumptions used in the model, as well as information about where the underlying data can be accessed by the public.

Without access to these assumptions and source data, it is very difficult for members of the public to meaningfully evaluate the conclusions produced by the model.

6. Mule Deer Winter Range

I have similar questions regarding Mule Deer Winter Range (MDWR).

The paper states that:

“a sensitivity analysis was conducted to evaluate the effect on timber supply of excluding all harvesting in the MDWR.”

What exactly did this analysis involve?

I would like to see not only the consequences for timber supply of protecting MDWR, but also the reverse analysis: what are the ecological and wildlife consequences of continuing to harvest within Mule Deer Winter Range?

If the principal variable being measured is timber supply, then the analysis risks treating wildlife habitat primarily as a constraint on timber production rather than as an ecological value in its own right.

7. Commercial thinning

The paper states that approximately 220 hectares of commercial thinning have already been completed in the 100 Mile House TSA and that additional commercial thinning is planned by licensees. A sensitivity analysis was therefore conducted to evaluate its influence on timber supply.

I would like greater clarity regarding the objectives of commercial thinning.

If timber removed through commercial thinning enters the commercial timber supply, how is commercial thinning distinguished from conventional harvesting from an ecological and economic perspective?

What proportion of these treatments is undertaken primarily for forest health, resilience or wildfire objectives, and what proportion is economically driven by timber recovery?

The term “thinning” by itself does not demonstrate an ecological benefit. The ecological consequences presumably depend on which trees are removed, how many are retained, their age and species, the resulting canopy structure, soil disturbance, road access, retained deadwood and the characteristics of the forest before and after treatment.

8. Wildfire mitigation and fuel-break programs

The paper states that wildfire mitigation programs have been implemented to improve community safety and forest resilience through primary and landscape-level fuel breaks, wildland-urban-interface treatments, thinning and other fuel-reduction treatments.

I would appreciate a detailed account of which projects have actually been implemented within the 100 Mile House TSA to date.

I am aware of the work east of Lac La Hache and the fuel-break work currently underway along Helena Lake Road, involving three licensees. Based on what I have observed at Helena Lake Road, I also have concerns about whether all harvesting occurring under the description of “fire mitigation” is necessary to achieve the stated wildfire-risk-reduction objectives.

What other wildfire-mitigation projects have been completed?

For each project, I would like to know its location, area treated, treatment prescription, amount of timber removed, amount and type of vegetation retained, responsible licensee or agency, and the criteria used to evaluate whether the treatment successfully reduced wildfire risk.

9. Wildfire assumptions and timber supply

My understanding of one of the paper's conclusions is that, if wildfire continues to disturb forest stands, avoiding harvesting in anticipation of future wildfire losses could reduce timber supply in both the short and long term.

If I have interpreted this correctly, it raises an important question:

Does the modelling effectively support harvesting existing stands sooner because they might otherwise be lost to wildfire?

If so, I believe this assumption deserves much more public discussion. A standing forest has ecological value regardless of whether it will eventually be available as merchantable timber. Its value includes wildlife habitat, water regulation, carbon storage, soil protection, temperature regulation and landscape connectivity.

Potential future wildfire should therefore not, by itself, become a justification for accelerating present-day harvesting.

10. Wildlife impacts

One of the most significant omissions I see in the discussion paper is a comprehensive assessment of the cumulative impacts of timber harvesting on wildlife.

I would like to see consideration of changes in populations and habitat conditions for species such as caribou, moose, beaver and other wildlife dependent on forest and wetland ecosystems.

Logging can affect wildlife through the removal of nesting and denning sites, fragmentation of continuous habitat, creation of roads and forest edges, changes to predator access, reduction of structural complexity and isolation of wildlife populations.

Where in the timber supply analysis are these impacts quantified?

More importantly, are wildlife populations and habitat conditions treated as ecological limits within which timber harvesting must operate, or primarily as constraints incorporated into a timber-supply model?

11. Groundwater, creeks and wetlands

I am also missing a comprehensive analysis of hydrological impacts.

What assessment has been made of the cumulative effects of logging and associated road construction on groundwater recharge, groundwater levels, seasonal runoff, creeks, wetlands and riparian ecosystems?

These questions are particularly important under changing climatic conditions, where reduced snowpack, higher temperatures, drought and changing precipitation patterns may already be placing pressure on water systems.

The relevant question should not only be whether an individual cut block complies with existing requirements, but what happens when the cumulative effects of multiple cut blocks, roads, wildfire and climate change are considered across an entire watershed.

12. Wildfire behavior and forest structure

I would also like to see a more balanced discussion of the relationship between forestry and wildfire.

Fuel reduction near communities can clearly serve an important public-safety purpose. However, this should not automatically lead to the conclusion that removing more mature forest across the broader landscape necessarily reduces wildfire risk.

How does the analysis distinguish between wildfire-mitigation treatments immediately surrounding communities and broader commercial harvesting?

What evidence is being used to determine how different forest structures—including mature stands, young regenerating stands, plantations and recently harvested areas—affect wildfire behavior under different weather conditions?

13. Microclimate and climate impacts

The analysis should also consider the effects of forest removal on local microclimates.

Removing canopy changes shade, wind exposure, soil temperature, evaporation, snow accumulation and melt, and moisture retention. Recently harvested areas can therefore function very differently from mature forests.

How are these changes incorporated into assumptions about future forest growth, water availability, drought vulnerability and wildfire risk?

I would also like to know how carbon storage and emissions associated with harvesting, decomposition, wildfire, forest regeneration and wood products are incorporated into the analysis.

14. Cumulative effects

Perhaps my most important question is how cumulative effects are being addressed.

Forests in the Cariboo are not affected by logging in isolation. They are simultaneously experiencing logging, road construction, wildfire, drought, insects, changing snowpack, higher temperatures and other consequences of climate change.

How are these cumulative impacts considered together rather than project by project?

A forest-management model that assumes future regeneration without adequately incorporating the combined effects of these pressures' risks presenting a level of certainty that may not exist.

15. Maps and spatial information

For meaningful public participation, I believe the discussion paper should also provide clear and accessible maps.

In particular, I would like to see:

- maps identifying areas expected or potentially available for future harvesting;
- maps showing remaining relatively undisturbed or intact forest;
- existing and proposed cut blocks;
- existing and proposed roads;
- Mule Deer Winter Range and other designated wildlife habitat;
- old and mature forest;
- wetlands, creeks, lakes and riparian areas;
- areas affected by recent wildfires;
- completed and proposed wildfire-mitigation treatments; and
- areas where managed stands are expected to replace natural stands as the future timber supply.

Without this spatial context, a projection expressed primarily in cubic meters per year does not provide the public with a clear picture of what the proposed timber supply actually means on the landscape.

Conclusion

My main takeaway from the discussion paper is that the analysis appears primarily designed to determine how a continuing timber supply can be maintained in the 100 Mile House TSA. What I am not seeing with equal clarity is an assessment of whether that level of harvesting can be maintained while protecting the ecological systems on which forests, wildlife and communities depend.

I am not suggesting that all logging should stop. I am questioning whether the current scale, location and methods of logging are ecologically and socially sustainable, particularly in light of climate change and the cumulative disturbances already affecting the Cariboo.

This comes back to the meaning of the word “sustainable.”

If sustainability is measured primarily by whether another merchantable tree crop will be available for harvesting in the future, that is sustainable timber production. It does not necessarily demonstrate sustainable forest management.

A broader definition of sustainability must also consider biodiversity, wildlife habitat, mature forest structure, water systems, soils, carbon storage, wildfire resilience, landscape connectivity and the ability of these ecosystems to function under a changing climate.

FOR INFORMATION CORRESPONDENCE

I would therefore appreciate clarification about how these ecological values are incorporated into the timber supply analysis, what measurable thresholds are used to protect them, and how the public can access the underlying data and spatial information necessary to independently understand the conclusions.

Thank you for taking the time to consider these questions.

Kind regards,

Katrin Levermann

Subject: Bridge creek/centennial park

For more than forty years I have lived in 100 Mile House and there have always been people using Centennial Park and Bridge Creek. Families swim there. Kids play in that water every summer. Right now the beavers are plugging the creek and you have allowed what used to be a flowing creek to turn into mostly rocks with low stagnant pools. That is not stewardship. That is neglect. Your CAO's claim that Bridge Creek has "no municipal purpose" is offensive when Centennial Park is a municipal park. When the town's main promotional banner literally features Bridge Creek Falls. And when generations of residents have used that area for recreation. You ripped out our skateboard park. You refused for years to give this town a pool. You wrecked the 108 beach that used to be packed with people when I was a kid. Now you are refusing to deal with the creek. What exactly do you expect families and teenagers in this town to do. Sit at home and twiddle our thumbs. Drive to bigger cities and spend our money there instead. Your own drought and water studies have talked about Bridge Creek as a potential municipal water source again. Yet in this email you suddenly pretend it has no municipal relevance so you do not have to spend a dollar. You cannot have it both ways. On top of the recreation issue there are clear health concerns. Children are swimming and playing in low stagnant water behind beaver dams. That is a perfect recipe for bacterial growth and contaminated water. If you are going to allow beavers to fundamentally change a public swimming and recreation area then you have a duty to either manage the dams responsibly or clearly post health warnings and close the area to water use. Beavers are rodents. They are not a protected sacred symbol. They are wildlife that needs to be actively managed when their activity impacts public parks and the safety of children. Hiding behind "differing perspectives" and "no municipal purpose" while kids are in that water is not acceptable. At minimum the District should be coordinating with the appropriate provincial ministries and Conservation Officer Service instead of dumping the work on residents to figure out which office to call. We pay taxes. You work for us. Stop pretending this is not your problem. Fix the creek. Restore safe flow through Centennial Park. And if you refuse to do that then be honest with the community that you are choosing to let one of the core public recreation spaces in this town die.

Thank you

RE: Letter of Support for the Central Interior Rural Division of Family Practice's Physician Recruitment Marketing Expansion Initiative

To Whom It May Concern,

On behalf of the District of 100 Mile House, I am pleased to provide this letter of support for the Central Interior Rural Division of Family Practice's application to Northern Development Initiative Trust's Marketing Initiatives Program for its Physician Recruitment Marketing Expansion Initiative.

The District recognizes that physician recruitment and retention remain among the most significant challenges facing communities throughout rural and northern British Columbia. Access to primary care services is essential to the health and well-being of residents and plays a critical role in supporting economic development, workforce attraction, and community growth.

The proposed initiative represents an important expansion of local physician recruitment efforts. By marketing physician opportunities through targeted Canadian and international medical journals, the Division will reach qualified physicians who may not otherwise be aware of the professional opportunities and exceptional quality of life available in 100 Mile House and the Central Interior region. The project will strengthen the region's ability to compete for highly sought-after healthcare professionals in an increasingly competitive recruitment environment.

The District of 100 Mile House supports innovative and proactive approaches to physician recruitment, particularly at a time when recent changes to physician licensing pathways have created new opportunities to attract internationally trained physicians to British Columbia. Expanding recruitment marketing efforts will help position our community to take advantage of these opportunities and increase awareness of the benefits of living and practicing medicine in our region.

The anticipated benefits of this initiative extend beyond healthcare. Increased physician capacity contributes to improved access to primary care, supports the recruitment and retention of other healthcare professionals, and enhances the overall attractiveness of our community for residents, families, businesses, and investors. A strong healthcare system is a foundational component of a vibrant and resilient community and is essential to the long-term prosperity of 100 Mile House and the surrounding region.

The District of 100 Mile House fully supports the Central Interior Rural Division of Family Practice's Physician Recruitment Marketing Expansion Initiative and its application to the Northern Development Initiative Trust Marketing Initiatives Program. We believe this project will make a meaningful contribution to addressing physician shortages and strengthening healthcare access for residents throughout the Central Interior.

Thank you for your consideration of this application.

Provide a concise description of the project:

This project will expand the Central Interior Rural Division of Family Practice's physician recruitment efforts through a targeted marketing campaign that builds on existing initiatives and enhances the region's visibility to prospective physicians. The project includes advertising practice opportunities in Canadian and international medical journals for the first time, as well as the development of a professionally produced community appreciation and recruitment video showcasing the Central Interior's collaborative healthcare environment, welcoming communities, and exceptional quality of life.

Together, these new recruitment assets will be used across digital campaigns, future conferences, physician outreach, onboarding, and social media to strengthen the region's competitiveness in attracting qualified physicians and nurse practitioners.

By increasing physician recruitment, the project aims to strengthen the long-term economic vitality of Williams Lake, 100 Mile House, and the surrounding region by improving access to primary care and supporting the sustainability of local healthcare services. A strong local healthcare system helps attract and retain residents, businesses, and a skilled workforce while supporting broader economic growth and community resilience.

Please explain the rationale for your project:

Healthcare workforce shortages continue to affect communities of all sizes across British Columbia and Canada. While provincial recruitment initiatives provide important support, communities must also lead their own recruitment efforts to remain competitive in attracting physicians. The supply of Canadian-trained physicians is not keeping pace with the healthcare attachment and access needs of growing and aging populations, making international recruitment an increasingly important component of long-term workforce planning.

Recent changes by the Ministry of Health, including the removal of the provisional licensing requirement for eligible internationally trained physicians, have created new opportunities to recruit qualified physicians from international markets. These changes have strengthened British Columbia's competitiveness as a destination for physicians and make targeted international advertising both timely and strategic.

Successful physician recruitment extends beyond advertising available practice opportunities. Physicians also consider factors such as community support, quality of life, professional collaboration, and a sense of belonging when deciding where to practise. Developing a professionally produced community appreciation and recruitment video will allow the Division to authentically showcase the Central Interior's welcoming communities, collaborative healthcare environment, and the value placed on physicians and nurse practitioners. As a long-term recruitment asset, the video will complement traditional marketing efforts by helping prospective candidates build a meaningful connection to the region before they visit or apply.

By promoting physician opportunities in the Central Interior through expanded advertising and compelling recruitment assets, this project will increase awareness of the region, strengthen the Division's recruitment reach, and support the attraction of physicians to communities experiencing ongoing workforce shortages.

Outline the projected economic benefits to the local or regional economy:

The Physician Recruitment Marketing Expansion Initiative will contribute to the long-term economic vitality of Williams Lake, 100 Mile House and the region more broadly by strengthening the local healthcare workforce through expanded physician recruitment.

Access to reliable healthcare is a critical component of a healthy economy. Recruiting additional family physicians helps improve access to not only primary care and supports the sustainability of essential healthcare services, including rural emergency departments and facility-based care, urgent and primary care services, and maternity care. A stable healthcare system enables residents to access care closer to home, reduces disruptions to local services, and supports a healthier, more productive workforce.

Healthcare availability is also an important factor in attracting and retaining businesses, professionals, and their families. Employers are more likely to invest and expand in communities where employees have access to dependable healthcare services. A robust healthcare system enhances the region's competitiveness by supporting workforce attraction and retention across all sectors, not just healthcare.

As part of this initiative, the development of a professionally produced community appreciation and physician recruitment video will create a long-term marketing asset that showcases the Central Interior's welcoming communities, collaborative healthcare environment, and exceptional quality of life. By highlighting the strong community support for healthcare providers and promoting the region through authentic storytelling, the video will strengthen recruitment efforts, enhance the region's visibility to prospective physicians, and support ongoing attraction initiatives well beyond the project period.

The project will also strengthen the Central Interior's appeal to prospective residents, investors, and visitors. Access to quality healthcare is increasingly considered when individuals and families choose where to live, work, retire, or travel. Communities with stable healthcare services are better positioned to attract tourism, new housing development, educational opportunities, childcare investment, and other forms of economic growth.

Each physician recruited through this initiative generates economic activity beyond the healthcare system. Physicians establish practices, employ clinic staff, support the real estate market, purchase local services, contribute to the municipal tax base, and support other local businesses. Additional physician capacity also supports the recruitment and retention of nurses, allied health professionals, and other healthcare workers, creating further economic benefits throughout the region.

By expanding recruitment into new Canadian and international markets and investing in innovative recruitment marketing tools, this project will position the Central Interior to compete more effectively for highly qualified physicians, helping to build a resilient healthcare system that supports sustainable economic growth and community prosperity.

Outline the specific outcomes of the project that will be measured to determine the effectiveness:

- Expand recruitment into new markets by advertising in at least two targeted Canadian and international medical journals, creating a new physician recruitment channel for the Central Interior (Williams Lake, 100 Mile House, and Tatla Lake).
- Produce a professionally developed community appreciation and physician recruitment video to showcase the Central Interior's collaborative healthcare environment, welcoming communities, and quality of life. The video will serve as a long-term recruitment asset for use in digital marketing campaigns, conferences, physician outreach, onboarding, and social media.
- Generate a minimum of 20 qualified physician inquiries from Canadian and international candidates interested in practising in the Central Interior.

- Facilitate at least 10 recruitment engagements, including virtual meet and greets, interviews, or community site visits with interested physicians.
- Increase awareness of physician opportunities in the Central Interior by reaching an estimated audience of more than 400,000 physicians and medical trainees through targeted medical publications and digital recruitment initiatives, including the recruitment video.
- Establish a sustainable physician recruitment marketing strategy, supported by reusable advertising materials and a professional recruitment video, that can be evaluated, refined, and leveraged for future national and international recruitment campaigns.

Overview

BC Transit has prepared this Fare Review report for the District of 100 Mile House and the Cariboo Regional District to support decision-making regarding potential fare structure adjustments. The Fare Review process provides an opportunity to regularly assess fare strategies in response to changes in operating costs, inflation, ridership, and investment. The goal of the review is to develop a fare structure that supports revenue generation, attracts and retains ridership, maintains affordability, and aligns with BC Transit's Fare Guidelines.

The District of 100 Mile House and the Cariboo Regional District have the authority to set fares for the 100 Mile House Transit System, with two exceptions: the BC Bus Pass and the Get on Board Program, which provides free transit for youth 12 and under. These are provincially funded initiatives and are applied to the local government's budget in accordance with provincial allocation models. BC Transit has agreements with the Province to deliver these programs across BC Transit systems; therefore, they are outside the scope of this Fare Review.

The 100 Mile House Transit System is one of the few remaining BC Transit systems that uses a zone-based fare structure and offers different single-ride cash fares by passenger type. As part of the review, several fare change options were developed in alignment with BC Transit's Fare Guidelines. The options consider opportunities to simplify the fare structure, improve consistency across fare products, and provide a more straightforward experience for customers.

Option 3 is recommended as the preferred approach. The recommended option provides a balanced and phased approach to updating the fare structure while simplifying the customer experience and improving consistency across conventional and On-Request services.

The proposed changes are intended to establish a simpler and more sustainable fare structure for the 100 Mile House Transit System while continuing to provide discounted fare products for eligible passengers. The following sections outline the analysis undertaken, the fare change options considered, and the rationale supporting the recommended approach.

Current Fare Structure

Fare Review History

The 100 Mile House Transit System fares were last reviewed in 2008. As part of that review, all single-ride fares increased by $0.25, ticket prices were adjusted to align with BC Transit fare guidelines and set at nine times the single-ride fare, and monthly pass prices increased by approximately $5. Since then, fares have remained unchanged for 18 years.

The only other change since then was in 2021, where the Province of British Columbia introduced the Free Transit for Children 12 and Under Program, which provides provincially funded free transit for children aged 12 and under across all BC Transit systems.

Table 1: 100 Mile House Transit System Fare Review History

		Zone 2 – All	$2.00	$2.25
		Zone 3 – Adult	$2.50	$2.75
		Zone 3 – Senior/Student	$2.25	$2.50

Sources of Fare Revenue

Most fare revenue in the 100 Mile House Transit System is generated through single-ride fares purchased onboard at the farebox. In the 2025/26 fiscal year, local single-ride cash fares accounted for 25% of total fare revenue, while cash fares collected on the Health Connections route to Williams Lake contributed an additional 25%.

Pre-purchased tickets represented a relatively small share of revenue (4%), with Zone 1 tickets generating 1% of total fare revenue and Zone 2 tickets generating 3%.

Monthly passes can be used on both Zones 1 and 2 on conventional routes and accounted for 5% of total fare revenue. Of this, adult monthly passes generated 73% of monthly pass revenue, while student and senior monthly passes accounted for the remaining 27%. Overall, adult customers were more likely to purchase monthly passes than tickets.

The Provincial BC Bus Pass Program and the Free Transit for Children 12 and Under Program together represented 41% of fare-related revenue. As funding for these programs is established provincially, this revenue cannot be influenced through the local fare review process.

Supportive Transit Programs

To ensure that transit is accessible to all, a range of supportive programs have been implemented to assist individuals facing financial or mobility challenges. The following initiatives, available in the 100 Mile House Transit System and are designed to help those in need access essential services and stay connected to their communities. These programs aim to make public transit more inclusive and equitable.

BC Bus Pass Program

The BC Bus Pass Program provides unlimited transit access to low-income seniors ($45/year) and individuals on disability assistance (free). Designed to ensure affordable and accessible transportation, it helps participants stay connected to their communities. Registration is available online, by phone, email, mail, or fax. The program is funded by the BC Ministry of Social Development and Poverty Reduction and is available across all BC transit systems. More information about the BC Bus Pass program can be found at the Province's BC Bus Pass webpage.

Get on Board Program - Free Transit for Children 12 and Under

This initiative is funded by the BC Ministry of Transportation and Transit, generating 2% of fare revenue for 100 Mile House Transit System in the 2025/26 fiscal year, with the goal of not only increasing ridership but also fostering a sense of independence and familiarity with public transit among youth. By making transit free for children, the program aims to instill lifelong habits of sustainable transportation use. Eligibility includes:

- Children aged 6 to 12: Can ride unaccompanied without requiring a fare product or ID.
- Children aged 5 and under: Must be accompanied by someone 12 years or older and must board and depart at the same stop as their guardian.

BC Transit Fare Guidelines

BC Transit's Fare Guidelines are based on industry best practice for public transit and have been developed to provide guidance to local governments in setting fares. The Fare Guidelines promote a balance between maximizing fare revenues while maintaining affordability and growing ridership. BC Transit's fare strategy focuses on fare products that attract customers, encourage ridership, and are easy to sell.

Table 2: BC Transit Fare Guidelines

Product	Audience	Price
Single-Ride	All	Base
Tickets (10)	All	9 Times Base Fare
Adult Monthly Pass	All	20 to 30 Times Base Fare
Concession Monthly Pass	Senior / Student	Adult 30-Day Pass less 15%
No Fare Transfers, No Zones

The 100 Mile House Transit System's current fare structure is inconsistent with BC Transit's recommended fare guidelines. The system includes three fare zones and eight different single-ride fare prices across conventional and on-request services, resulting in a fare structure that is more complex than recommended. BC Transit promotes a simplified, easy-to-understand fare structure to improve the customer experience, reduce barriers to using transit, and streamline fare administration.

While ticket books are priced at nine times the single-ride fare, consistent with BC Transit fare guidelines, the monthly pass is priced at only 17.5 times the single-ride fare. BC Transit recommends pricing monthly passes between 20 and 30 times the single-ride fare to encourage regular use while maintaining appropriate fare value. In addition, the discounted monthly pass for students and seniors is currently offered at a 20% discount from the adult pass, whereas BC Transit fare guidelines recommend a 15% discount. BC Transit also recommends a universal single-ride fare for all riders to simplify boarding, improve customer understanding, and reduce operator interactions. Discounts for eligible riders are instead provided through discounted monthly passes.

Key Facts and Figures

The table below outlines some key performance statistics for the 100 Mile House Transit System for the 2024/25 fiscal year.

Table 3: Key Facts and Figures

Fleet Size	3
2024/25 Total Revenue	$27,900
2024/25 Total Ridership	10,700
Operating Cost / Passenger Trip ($)	$33
Operating Cost / Service Hour ($)	$110
Cost Recovery	7.9%
Date of Last Fare Adjustment	2008

Over the past five years, ridership and fare revenue in the 100 Mile House Transit System have been influenced by the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic and the subsequent recovery period. During this time, fares have remained unchanged and have not kept pace with inflation or the rising costs of delivering transit service. As operating costs continue to increase due to inflationary pressures, including labour, fuel, and maintenance, the system's cost recovery is expected to decline unless fare adjustments or other revenue-generating measures are implemented.

Figure 2 illustrates total fare revenue, total operating costs, and the corresponding cost recovery rate over the past five years, and compares cost recovery with the average across comparable systems. As operating costs are projected to continue increasing, maintaining or improving the system's cost recovery will be an important consideration in ensuring the long-term financial sustainability of the transit system.

Comparison of Similar Transit Systems

To determine reasonable fare levels for the 100 Mile House Transit System, the following table provides a comparison of comparable BC Transit Systems in the province that serve communities and/or have similar total annual ridership or scale. The table below highlights that all comparable systems have adopted a universal single-ride fare, currently ranging from $2.00 to $2.75, and monthly passes priced between $42 to $60. Ridership is based on 2024 fiscal year data compiled by BC Transit in its annual performance summary reports.

Table 4: Comparison of Fares in Comparable Transit Systems

Transit System	Last Fare Review	Ridership	Adult Cash Fare	Student/ Senior Cash Fare	Adult Monthly Pass	Student/ Senior Monthly Pass	Health Connections
100 Mile House	2008	10,729	$2.00	$1.75	$35	$28	$5
Elk Valley	2008	13,824	$2.00	-	$42	-	$2.50
Columbia Valley	2012	11,125	$2.50	-	$42	-	$2.50
Smithers	2015	13,824	$2.75	-	$50	$42	$5
Bella Coola	2012	17,274	$2.50	-	$60	-	-

Comparing Transit Fares: 100 Mile House vs. National Trends

The average adult single-ride fare across Canada was $3.50 in 2023, according to the Canadian Urban Transit Association (CUTA) Canadian Transit Statistics Dashboard.

100 Mile House transit system's single-ride fares were last increased in 2008 to $2.00 for an adult Zone 2 fare and $1.75 for a student/senior Zone 2 fare. Based on cumulative inflation, these fares would be equivalent to approximately $2.93 and $2.56, respectively, in 2026, representing a 46.5% increase over 18 years, as calculated using the Bank of Canada's Inflation Calculator.

Despite inflationary increases in the cost of delivering transit service, 100 Mile House's current adult single-ride fare remains below the national average. This indicates that the purchasing power of fare revenue has declined over time and has contributed to increased pressure on cost recovery. Strategic fare adjustments should be considered to better align fares with inflation, maintain affordability, and support the long-term sustainability of the transit system.

Since many comparable systems have not had a fare change in a number of years, an example of a recently conducted fare review in a nearby transit system has been provided below, to offer an example of how transit systems in British Columbia are adjusting.

Quesnel Transit System Fare Review Comparison

The neighbouring Quesnel Transit System conducted a fare review earlier in 2026 and approved a phased fare increase over three years, with the first increase implemented in June 2026. Fares had remained unchanged since 2010. The following table outlines the fare products available in the Quesnel Transit System and demonstrates the introduction of a universal single-ride fare, fare increases aligned with inflation, and the continued availability of an affordable 30-day pass for regular transit riders.

Table 5: Phased fare increases in Quesnel Transit System

Fare Product	Audience	Current	2026/27	2027/28	2029/30
Single Ride	Adult	$1.75	$2.25	$2.75	$3.00
	Senior / Student	$1.50
DayPASS	Adult	$3.50	$4.50	$5.50	$6.00
	Senior / Student	$3.00
30-Day Pass	Adult	$35.00	$45	$55	$60
	Senior / Student	$25.00	$35	$45	$50

Fare Change Options

The fare change options outlined below were developed in alignment with BC Transit's Fare Guidelines and present three distinct approaches for consideration. Each option balances the need for inflationary adjustments, affordability for riders, and long-term financial sustainability of the transit system.

All proposed options introduce a universal single-ride fare. The majority of BC Transit systems have adopted a universal single-ride fare to support ease of use and improve the customer experience for all passengers. The 100 Mile House Transit System is one of the few remaining systems that offers discounted single-ride cash fares by passenger type and zone.

Moving to a universal single-ride fare would simplify the fare structure, reduce administrative complexity, and make fares easier for customers to understand and use. The universal fare would also apply to On-Request services, eliminating the need for a separate zone-based fare structure.

With the removal of the zone-based system, ticket and monthly pass products could be extended to include On-Request rural transit services. Discounted monthly passes would continue to be available to eligible students and seniors for conventional fixed-route services, while also providing access to On-Request and rural transit services.

Table 6: Proposed Fare Options

Fare Product	Audience	Current	Option 1	Option 2
Conventional Fixed Route Single Ride	Zone 1 - Adult	$1.50	$2.50	$3.00
	Zone 1 - Senior/Student	$1.25
	Zone 2 - Adult	$2.00
	Zone 2 - Senior/Student	$1.75
Tickets (10)	Zone 1 - Adult	$13.50	$22.50	$27
	Zone 1 - Senior/Student	$11.25
	Zone 2 - Adult	$18.00
	Zone 2 - Senior/Student	$15.75
Monthly Pass	Adult	$35.00	$50	$60
	Senior/Student	$28.00	$40	$50
On-Request and Rural Transit Single Ride	Zone 1 – All	$1.75	$2.50	$3.00
	Zone 2 – All	$2.25
	Zone 3 – Adult	$2.75
	Zone 3 – Senior/Student	$2.50
Health Connections – to Williams Lake	All	$5.00	$5.00	$6.00

Option 1 – Moderate Change

Option 1 introduces a universal single-ride fare, removes zone-based pricing, and applies a moderate increase to the single-ride fare, increasing it from the current range of $1.25 to $2.00 to a universal fare of $2.50. The 10-ticket product is adjusted to $22.50, maintaining the recommended nine-trip multiplier of the base fare.

The monthly pass is priced at the lower end of BC Transit's recommended fare guideline range at 20 times the single-ride fare. The discounted monthly pass continues to be offered to students and seniors at the 20% discount they are accustomed to today to support affordability and ease the transition. This option represents a balanced approach, providing additional revenue while limiting the impact on occasional and frequent riders.

Option 2 – Catch up with Inflation

Option 2 increases the universal single-ride fare to $3.00, recognizing inflationary pressures following more than 18 years without a fare increase. Health Connections fares increase to twice the universal single-ride fare, resulting in a $1.00 increase.

The 10-ticket product increases to $27.00, maintaining a consistent 9-time multiplier from the base fare. The monthly pass is priced at $60, equivalent to 20 times the single-ride fare, while continuing to provide $10 discount for students and seniors. This option more closely aligns fare levels with current inflationary conditions while continuing to provide value through discounted prepaid fare products for frequent riders.

Option 3 – Phased Approach

Option 3 presents a phased approach that combines the changes proposed in Options 1 and 2. Under this option, the moderate fare adjustments outlined in Option 1 would be implemented initially, followed by incremental increases over the subsequent two years to reach the fare levels identified in Option 2.

This approach provides riders with time to adjust to fare changes while establishing a predictable pathway toward improving fare revenue and supporting the long-term financial sustainability of the transit system.

Table 7: Option 3 - Phased Approach

Fare Product	Audience	Current	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3
Conventional Fixed Route Single Ride	Zone 1 - Adult	$1.50	$2.50	$2.75	$3.00
	Zone 1 - Senior/Student	$1.25
	Zone 2 - Adult	$2.00
	Zone 2 - Senior/Student	$1.75
Tickets (10)	Zone 1 - Adult	$13.50	$22.50	$24.75	$27
	Zone 1 - Senior/Student	$11.25
	Zone 2 - Adult	$18.00
	Zone 2 - Senior/Student	$15.75
Monthly Pass	Adult	$35.00	$50	$55	$60
	Senior/Student	$28.00	$40	$45	$50
On-Request and Rural Single Ride	Zone 1 – All	$1.75	$2.50	$2.75	$3.00
	Zone 2 – All	$2.25
	Zone 3 – Adult	$2.75
	Zone 3 – Senior/Student	$2.50
Health Connections to Williams Lake	All	$5.00	$5.00	$5.50	$6.00

Fare Option Recommendation

Option 3 is recommended as the preferred approach as it provides a balanced pathway toward improving fare alignment, supporting system sustainability, and minimizing the immediate impact on riders. This option addresses the current inconsistencies within the 100 Mile House Transit System's fare structure by introducing a universal single-ride fare, simplifying fare products, and gradually aligning fares with BC Transit's recommended guidelines. Additionally, tickets and monthly pass products are recommended to be valid for on-request and rural service types once the universal single ride fare is implemented.

The phased implementation recognizes that fares have remained unchanged since 2008 and allows customers time to adjust to increased fares while providing the transit system with a predictable approach to increasing revenue. By gradually moving toward the target fare levels identified in Option 2, the system can better respond to inflationary pressures and rising operating costs while maintaining affordability through discounted monthly passes for students and seniors.

This approach also provides an opportunity to monitor customer response, ridership impacts, and revenue performance following the initial fare adjustment before implementing additional increases. Overall, Option 3 provides the strongest balance between improving cost recovery, maintaining customer accessibility, and supporting the long-term financial sustainability of the 100 Mile House Transit System.

Next Steps

Once Council approves a fare change and gives direction to BC Transit of their choice, a marketing campaign will be planned and executed to notify riders of the impending change. Marketing and communications teams require a 12-week lead time to effectively introduce a public campaign from the time of decision.
